

MILLE MIGLIA (1927-1957)

"A race undefined, almost supernatural, reminiscent of old fairytales as boys listened to; stories of fairies, wizards with boots, of endless horizons. Mille Miglia: an evocative phrase that proves to demonstrate the progress of means and boldness of men. A crazy, draining race, without pit stops, through countryside and city, mountains and seashores, day and night. Endless road running beneath the roaring machines, eyes that do not close to sleep, faces that do not tremble, drivers with nerves of steel."

- Giuseppe Tonelli, automobile journalist, 1927
